Planet-friendly
DISPOSABLES

“ Either we continue as we are and irreparably damage our planet, or we remember our unique power as human beings and our continual ability to lead, innovate and problem-solve. ”

Prince William, Earthshot Prize Founder

Today's customers expect planet-friendly innovation whilst keeping prices inexpensive. Combine that with your need for multi-functional products in a fast-paced environment, and you've got quite the challenge!

In this guide you'll find packaging solutions that prioritise practicality whilst reducing the impact on the environment.

Where Innovation Meets Functionality

Single-use plastics may have been banned, but there are plenty of alternative materials to meet requirements and enable you and your customers to be eco-conscious.

It can be quite the minefield, so here's a brief explanation of materials used in the products featured in this guide...

Bagasse

Made from reclaimed natural materials such as bamboo, sugarcane or wood pulp, bagasse is a fantastic replacement to polystyrene. Suitable for hot or cold food, the natural fibres create sturdy tableware more rigid than paper and can take hot, wet or oily foods.

Polyactic Acid PLA

Compostable bioplastic derived from plant sugars. Glucose is extracted from milled corn. It is then fermented to produce lactic acid, which is processed into a polymer and made into pellets. PLA is used in clear products like cold cups and deli containers, and to line board-based products.

Crystallised PLA (CPLA)

Crystallised PLA is used when more heat resistance is needed, like with lids. Note CPLA cutlery was banned in October 2023 when the single-use plastics legislation was enforced.

Seaweed Coating

Seaweed grows quickly and abundantly all over the world, and requires no fertilisers, freshwater or land. It grows naturally in oceans and captures carbon as it does. When used in packaging it can be recycled or composted. Even if it ends up in general waste it will disappear just like a piece of fruit.

Kraft

100% eco-friendly, kraft can be recycled or degrades naturally within a few weeks leaving no impact on the environment.

Bamboo

Bamboo is a natural fibre. It's a fast-growing, renewable grass that often has beneficial impacts on soil and air.

Birch Wood

Birch wood is sustainable thanks to the carbon sequestration of birch trees. Birch wood can be sourced locally, thus having a lower transporting carbon emission than tropical hardwoods.

“ When I took over the business you’d find bits of broken up polystyrene cups across the beach. We’re doing what we can to drive the right message and reduce our impact on the environment. We switched to compostable products (in this guide) 5 years ago, offer reusable cups, use wooden cutlery and serve takeaway food in Notpla packaging. Because it’s made from seaweed, this in itself tells a story to our end users.

Bridgette, Saunton Break Cafe

Savona has been taking positive steps since 2018 when we removed single-use plastics from our range - way ahead of the legislation being enforced in 2023. We have come a long way since then, adding pioneering 100% electric dual-temperature vans to our fleet - the first of their kind in Europe.

The latest data shows we have reduced emissions by 26% between 2019 and 2022, and we continue our efforts in order to be more sustainable, more economical, more accountable.
